

BRIAUNA WILLIAMS

A man is jogging on a path, as a squirrel watches and music plays

The man suddenly comes to a stop, and is out of breath.

The man goes to the doctor, and expresses concern that something is not right.

The doctor assures the man everything is normal. The man leaves the doctor's office.

We see an image of an anatomical heart, in the center of the page.

The man returns to the doctor, 3 months later, and says "something still is not right!".

The man enters a scanner to investigate the condition of the heart more closely.

The doctor informs the man that "your heart disease is bad", while holding his hand; says "you will need a heart transplant in the next 3 years", and tells him to stop running.

The man goes to another doctor for a second opinion, and is told "you can run. We will manage the best we can".

The man commits to regular check-ups, and continues running to the sound of music.
