Sometimes it's a postcard. Sometimes it's a letter on pretty paper, the words printed in crayon. Often, it's a note with flowers — or simply an email.

Most of them say something like, "Thank you for saving my grandpa." Or, "I'm so grateful you were there for me."

Whether the patient is you, or your grandpa, please know this: We are grateful and honored to have an opportunity to provide care when a heart attack strikes.

We're so thankful to be recognized by the American Heart Association for meeting its Mission: Lifeline® heart attack systems of care standards.
