THE HEART-SMART PATIENT

The key is to start with modest goals, then stick to them.

eart disease strikes someone in the U.S. about once every 42 seconds.

It's the No. 1 cause of death in this country, killing more than 370,000 people a year. Fortunately, there are simple, inexpensive lifestyle changes that lead to big improvements in your heart health.

Just starting with these seven changes will have a big impact on many heart-risk factors.

1. Eat healthy. Try fruits, vegetables, whole grains, low-fat dairy, poultry, fish and nuts, and limit red meat and sugary foods and beverages. To get on track, look carefully at nutrition labels. Pick products with the least amount of sodium, added sugars, saturated fat and trans fat.

2. Manage blood pressure. Known as "the silent killer," asymptomatic high blood pressure (higher than 140 systolic or above or 90 diastolic or above) often leads to heart attack, stroke, kidney damage and vision loss.

To make a change, try a different diet. Your doctor may recommend reducing salt consumption, avoiding tobacco smoke, getting regular physical activity and maintaining a healthy weight.

3. Control cholesterol. High levels of low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol contribute to plaque, the waxy substance that clogs arteries and leads to heart disease and stroke. But low levels of high-density lipoprotein (HDL) cholesterol (which helps remove LDL cholesterol from your arteries) can increase the risk of heart disease.

Healthy eating and increased exercise will help you achieve the right balance. According to the American Heart Association's Chief Medical Officer for Prevention, Dr. Eduardo Sanchez, "What a person eats and portion sizes may contribute to high cholesterol and a higher risk of heart attacks and strokes. Eating more fruits and vegetables, in place of fatty, calorie dense foods, is one approach to improve the heart healthfulness of our diets."

4. Lower blood sugar. Blood sugar acts as fuel for the body. High levels can lead to diabetes, which can cause damage to your heart, kidneys, eyes and nerves. Controlling portions and reading food labels are important, as is limiting simple carbohydrates, such as table sugar, soda and candy.

5. Get moving. "Regular physical activity must also be part of a plan to improve heart health," Dr. Sanchez says. If you haven't been exercising, start with walking just 20 to 30 minutes every day. Physical activity can help lower your blood pressure and cholesterol.

6. Keep the weight off. This will reduce the strain on the heart, lungs and blood vessels. To do so, you'll need to burn more calories than you take in. One pound equals 3,500 calories; most people need to subtract about 500 calories daily from their diet to lose about a pound each week.

7. Quit smoking. This is one of the most important steps to improving heart health. Some people are able to quit on their

Small, Smart Changes

Cook fresh foods. East less red meat and more fruits and vegetables.

Get a stationary bike. It's easy and safe. Start with five minutes at a time.

Talk to your doctor.

In addition to a healthy lifestyle, you might need a prescription to lower cholesterol or blood pressure.

own, but others need help. An M.D. may recommend smoking cessation classes and support groups. You may also benefit from medical therapy, such as nicotine replacement medicines and non-nicotine prescription medicine, which can reduce the urge.
